

PET's Offset Service Alive and Waiting For You!

I just want to announce that PET has finally completed the Carbon Offset Service that we promised you a year ago, thanks to the combined efforts of Goran Wiklund, Bert Meyer, Amanda Hamm, Arun Patel, Cornelia Featherstone and myself. Thanks too to those many of you who contributed financially by voluntarily offsetting your flights this past year.

Now you can do it for real if/when you fly off to whatever sunrise &/or loved one beckons from afar. Though air travel produces a relatively astonishing amount of CO₂, those of you who will stay here this holiday season will also generate it, heating your abodes or driving about. All of it generates carbon dioxide that indeed makes our gardens and trees grow, but also adds to the surplus 'greenhouse gases' that contribute to global warming. And this time of year is ideal to do 'the reckoning', both for flights and household emissions.

I am also delighted to report that the Foundation has 'blessed' this undertaking, will announce it on their own website and invite their guests to join us in our ongoing community efforts to do our bit to avert runaway climate change. The 2019 'Climate & Consciousness' conference will do likewise.

We think you will be surprised how little we ask to offset flights to a variety of distant destinations. And by contributing to closely monitored carbon reduction projects in Kenya, Uganda, Brazil, India or even the UK, you will help keep the planet on a more even keel.

So, check us out at: www.parkecovillagetrust.co.uk and offset ASAP.

Love and blessings,
Roger D
